STY. n. f. [Frige, Saxon.]
1. A cabin to keep hogs in.

Tell Richmond,
That in the sty of this most bloody boar,
My son George Stanley is frank'd up in hold. Shakef. R. III.
When her hogs had mis'd their way,
Th' untoward creatures to the sty I drove,
And whistl'd all the way.
May thy black pigs lie warm in little sty,
And have no thought to grieve them 'till they die. King.

Any place of bestial debauchery.
They all their friends and native home forget,
To roll with pleasure in a sensual sty. Milton.

With what ease
Might'st thou expel this monster from his throne,
Now made a sty. Milton's Paradise Regain'd.
To STY. v. a. [from the noun.] To shut up in a sty.

STY'GIAN. adj. [Stygian, Latin.] Hellish; infernal; pertaining to Styx, one of the poetical rivers of hell.
At that so sudden blaze the Stygian throng Bent their aspect. Milton.

STYLE. n. f. [Stylus, Latin.]
1. Manner of writing with regard to language.

Happy
That can translate the stubbornness of fortune
Into so quiet, and so sweet a style. Shakef. Tempest.
Their beauty I will rather leave to poets, than venture upon so tender and nice a subject with my feverish style. Milton.
Proper words in proper places, make the true definition of a style. Swift.

Let some lord but own the happy lines,
How the wit brightens, and the style refines. Pope.
2. Manner of speaking appropriate to particular characters.

No style is held for base, where love well named is. Sidney.
There was never yet philosopher,
That could endure the toothach patiently,
However they have writ the style of gods,
And make a pilch at chance and sufferance. Shakef. Tempest.

3. Title; appellation.
Ford's a knave, and I will aggravate his style; thou shalt know him for knave and cuckold. Shakef. Tempest.

The king gave them in his commission the style and appellation which belonged to them. Clarendon.

O virgin! or what other name you bear
Above that style; O more than mortal fair!
Let not an humble suppliant sue in vain. Dryden's Æn.

Propitious hear our prayers,
Whether the style of Titan please thee more,
Whose purple rays th' Achæmenes adore. Pope's Statius.

4. Courte of writing. Unusual.
While his thoughts the ling'ring day beguile,
To gentle Arcite let us turn our style. Dryden.

5. A pointed iron used anciently in writing on tables of wax.
6. Any thing with a sharp point, as a graver; the pin of a dial.
Placing two styles or needles of the same steel, touched with the same loadstone, when the one is removed but half a span, the other would stand like Hercules's pillars. Brown.

7. The stalk which rises from amid the leaves of a flower.
Style is the middle prominent part of the flower of a plant, which adheres to the fruit or seed: 'tis usually slender and long, whence it has its name. Quincy.

The figure of the flower-leaves, stamina, apices, style, and seed-vessel. Roy.

8. STYLE of Court, is properly the practice observed by any court in its way of proceeding. Ayliffe's Parergon.

The chancellor of the Exchequer they had no mind should be styled a knight. Clarendon.

Err not that fo shall end
The strife which thou call'st evil, but we style
The strife of glory. Milton's Paradise Lost.

Fortune's gifts, my actions
May style their own rewards. Denham's Sephy.

Whoever backs his tenets with authorities, thinks he ought to carry the cause, and is ready to style it impudence in any one who shall stand out. Locke.

His conduct might have made him stil'd
A father, and the nymph his child. Swift.

STYPTICK. adj. [stypticus, Gr.] This is usually written styptic. See STYPTIC. The same as astringent; but generally expresses the most efficacious sort of astringents, or those which are applied to stop hemorrhages. Quincy.

Fruits of trees and shrubs contain phlegm, oil, and an essential salt, by which they are sharp, sweet, sour or styptic.

STYPTICITY. n. f. [Properly stypticity.] The power of stanching blood.

Catharticks of mercurials precipitate the viscidities by their stypticity, and mix with all animal acids. Ayliffe's Parergon.

To STYTHY. v. a. [See STYTHY.] To forge on an anvil.
By the forge that stythy'd Mars his helm,
I'll kill thee every where, yea, 'er and o'er. Shakef. Tempest.

SUA'SIBLE. adj. [from suade, Latin.] Easy to be persuaded.
SUA'SIVE. adj. [from suades, Lat.] Having power to persuade.
It had the passions in perfect subjection; and though its command over them was but suasive and political, yet it had the force of coercion, and despotical. South's Sermons.

SUA'SORY. adj. [suasorius, Latin.] Having tendency to persuade.

SUA'VITY. n. f. [suavis, French; suavitatis, Latin.]
1. Sweetness to the senses.
She desired them for rarity, pulchritude, and suavity. Brown.

2. Sweetness to the mind.
SUB. in composition, signifies a subordinate degree.
SUBA'CID. adj. [sub and acidus, Latin.] Sour in a small degree.

The juice of the stem is like the chyle in the animal body, not sufficiently concocted by circulation, and is commonly sub-acid in all plants. Arbutnot on Aliment.

SUBA'CRID. adj. [sub and acrid.] Sharp and pungent in a small degree.
The green choler of a cow tasted sweet, bitter, subacid, or a little pungent, and turned syrup of violets green. Flower.

To SUBA'CT. v. a. [subactus, Latin.] To reduce; to subdue.
Tangible bodies have no pleasure in the comfort of air, but endeavour to subact it into a more dense body. Bacon.

SUBA'CTION. n. f. [subactus, Latin.] The act of reducing to any state, as of mixing two bodies completely, or beating any thing to a very small powder.

There are of concoction two periods: the one assimilation, or absolute conversion and subaction; the other maturation; whereof the former is most conspicuous in living creatures, in which there is an absolute conversion and assimilation of the nourishment into the body. Bacon's Natural History.

SUBA'TERN. adj. [subalternus, French.] Inferior; subordinate; that which in different respects is both superior and inferior. It is used in the army of all officers below a captain.

There had like to have been a duel between two subalterns, upon a dispute which should be governor of Portsmouth. Add.

Love's subalterns, a duteous band,
Like watchmen round their chief appear;
Each had his lantern in his hand,
And Venus, mask'd, brought up the rear. Prior.

One, while a subaltern officer, was every day complaining against the pride of colonels towards their officers; yet after he received his commission for a regiment, he confessed the spirit of colonelship was coming fast upon him, and it daily increased to his death. Swift.

This sort of universal ideas, which may either be considered as a genus or species, is called subaltern. Watt.

SUBA'TERNATE. adj. [subalternus, Latin.] Succeeding by turns. Di.

small degree.

SUBBE'ADLE. n. f. [sub and beadle.] An under beadle.
They ought not to execute those precepts by simple messengers, or subbeadles, but in their own persons. Ayliffe's Parergon.

SUBCELESTIAL. adj. [sub and celestialis.] Placed beneath the heavens.

The most refined glories of subcelestial excellencies are but more faint resemblances of these. Glanville's Scyl.

SUBCH'ANTER. n. f. [sub and chanter; successor, Lat.] The deputy of the precentor in a cathedral. Watt.

SUBCLAVIAN. adj. [sub and clavus, Latin.] Subclavian is applied to any thing under the armpit or shoulder, whether artery, nerve, vein, or muscle. Quincy.

The liver, though seated on the right side, yet, by the sub-clavian division, doth equi-distantly communicate its activity unto either arm. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

The chyle first mixeth with the blood in the subclavian vein, and enters with it into the heart, where it is very imperfectly mixed, there being no mechanism nor fermentation to convert it into blood, which is effected by the lungs. Art.

SUBCONSTELLATION. n. f. [sub and constellation.] A subordinate or secondary constellation.

As to the picture of the seven stars, if thereby be meant the pleiades, or subconstellation upon the back of Taurus, with what congruity they are described in a clear night an ordinary eye may discover. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

SUBCONTRARY. adj. [sub and contrary.] Contrary in an inferior degree.
If two particular propositions differ in quality, they are subcontraries; as, some vine is a tree: some vine is not a tree. These may be both true together, but they can never be both false. Watt.

SUBCONTRACTED. part. adj. [sub and contracted.] Contracted after a former contract.
Your claim,
I bar it in the interest of my wife;
'Tis she is subcontracted to this lord,
And I her husband contradict your banns. Shakef. K. Lear.

SUB

SUBCONTRACTED. part. adj. [sub and contracted.] Contracted
after a former contract.
Your claim,
I bar it in the interest of my wife;
'Tis she is subcontracted to this lord,
And I her husband contradict your banns. Shakef. K. Lear.

SUBCUTANEOUS. adj. [sub and cutaneous.] Lying under the skin.

deacon's servant. Ayliffe's Parergon.

SUBDE'AN. n. f. [subdecanus, Lat.] The vicegerent of a dean.
Whenever the dean and chapter confirm any act, that such confirmation may be valid, the dean must join in person, and not in the person of a deputy or subdean only. Ayliffe.

SUBDECU'PLE. adj. [sub and decuplus, Lat.] Containing one part of ten.

SUBDERISORIOUS. adj. [sub and derisorius.] Scoffing or ridi-culing with tenderness and delicacy.

This subderisorious mirth is far from giving any offence to us:
it is rather a pleasant condiment of our conversation. Mere.

SUBDIT'TIOUS. adj. [subditiuus, Latin.] Put secretly in the place of something else.

To SUBDIVERSIFY. v. a. [sub and diversify.] To diversify again what is already diversified.

The same wool one man felts into a hat, another weaves it into cloth, another into arras; and these variously subdiversify according to the fancy of the artificer. Hale.

To SUBDIVIDE. v. a. [subdividere, French; sub and divide.]
To divide a part into yet more parts.

In the life of eight, in tones, there be two beams, or half notes; so as if you divide the tones equally, the eight is but seven whole and equal notes; and if you subdivide that into half notes, as in the stops of a lute, it maketh the number thirteen. Bacon's Nat. History.

When Brutus and Cassius were overthrown, soon after An-tonius and Octavianus brake and subdivided. Bacon.

The glad father glories in his child,
When he can subdivide a fraction. R. common.

When the progenies of Cham and Japhet swarmed into colonies, and those colonies were subdivided into many others, in time their descendants lost the primitive rites of divine worship, retaining only the notion of one deity. Dryden.

SUBDIVISION. n. f. [subdivisio, French; from subdivide.]
1. The act of subdividing.

When any of the parts of any idea are farther divided, in order to a clear explication of the whole, this is called a subdivision; as when a year is divided into months, each month into days, and each day into hours, which may be farther subdivided into minutes and seconds. Watt's Logic.

2. The parts distinguished by a second division.
How can we see such a multitude of souls cast under so many subdivisions of misery, without reflecting on the abur-dity of a government that sacrifices the happiness of so many reasonable beings to the glory of one? Addison.

In the decimal table the subdivisions of the cubit, as span, palm, and digit, are deduced from the shorter cubit. Arbutnot.

SUBDOLOUS. adj. [subdulus, Latin.] Cunning; subtle; sly.
To SUBDUCE. v. a. [subduco, subducere, Latin.]
To SUBDUCE. v. a. [subduco, subducere, Latin.]

1. To withdraw; to take away.
Or nature fail'd in me, and left some part
Not proof enough such object to sustain;
Or from my side subducing, took perhaps More than enough. Milton's Paradise Lost.

2. To subtract by arithmetical operation.
Take the other operation of arithmetick, subtraction: if out of that supposed infinite multitude of antecedent generations we should subduce ten, the residue must be less by ten than it was before, and yet still the quotient must be infinite. Hale.

SUBDUCTION. n. f. [from subduct.]
1. The act of taking away.

Possibly the Divine Beneficence subducing that influence, which it communicated from the time of their first creation, they were kept in a state of immortality 'till that moment of the subduction. Hale's Origin of Mankind.

2. Arithmetical subtraction.
Suppose we take the other operation of arithmetick, subduction: if out of that infinite multitude of antecedent generations we should subduct ten, the residue must be less by ten than it was before that subduction, and yet still the quotient be infinite. Hale.

To SUBDUCE. v. a. [from subduco, or subduco, Latin.]
1. To crush; to oppress; to sink; to overpower.
Nothing could have subdu'd nature
To such a lowliness, but his unkind daughters. Shakef. Tempest.

Them that rose up against me, hast thou subduced under me.
2 Sa. xxii. 40. Milton.

If aught were worthy to subduce
The soul of man. Milton.

2. To conquer; to reduce under a new dominion.
Be fruitful, and replenish the earth, and subduce it. Gen. i. 28.

SUB

Augustus Cæsar subdued Egypt to the Roman empire. Peach.
To overcome in battle, and subdue
Nations, and bring home spoils. Milton.

The Romans made those times the standard of their wit, when they subdued the world. Spenser.

3. To tame; to subact.
Nor is't unwholesome to subdue the land
By often exercise; and where before You broke the earth, again to plow. Mary's Virgil.

SUBDU'EMENT. n. f. [from subdue.] Conquest. A word not used, nor worthy to be used.

I have seen thee,
As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed, Bravely despoiling forests and subdu'ed empires. Shakef. Tempest.

SUBDU'ER. n. f. [from subdue.] Conquerour; tamer.
Great god of might, that reignest in the mind,
And all the body to thy best do it frame;
Victor of gods, subdue of mankind,
That do'st the lions and fell tygers tame,
Who can express the glory of thy might? Spenser.

Their curious eye
Discerns their great subducer's awful mien
And corresponding features fair. Philips.

Figs are great subducers of acrimony, useful in hoarseness and coughs, and extremely emollient. Arbutnot.

SUBDU'PLE. adj. [subduplus, Fr. f. b and duplus, Latin.]
SUBDUPLICATE. adj. [subduplus, Fr. f. b and duplus, Latin.]

As one of these under subduples doth abate half of that heaviness which the weight hath in itself, and cause the power to be in a subduple proportion unto it, so two of them do abate half of that which remains, and cause a subquadruple proportion, and three a subsextuple. Watt's Math. A. ar.

The motion generated by the forces in the whole passage of the body or thing through that space, shall be in a subduplicite proportion of the forces. Watt's Opt.

SUBJACENT. adj. [subjacens, Latin.] Lying under.
The superficial parts of rocks and mountains are washed away by rains, and borne down upon the subjacent plains. Wood.

To SUBJEC'T. v. a. [subjactus, Latin.]
1. To put under.

The angel led them direct, and down the cliff as fast
To the subjected plain. Milton.

The medal bears each form and name:
In one short view, subjected to our eye,
Gods, emperors, heroes, sages, beauties lie. Pope.

2. To reduce to submission; to make subordinate; to make submissive.

Think not, young warriors, your diminish'd name
Shall lose of lustre, by subjecting rage
To the cool dictates of experience'd age. Dryden.

3. To enslave; to make obnoxious.
I live on bread like you, feel want like you,
Taste grief, need friends, like you. Subjected thus,
How can you say to me, I am a king? Shakef. Rich. II.

I see thee, in that fatal hour,
Subjected to the victor's cruel pow'r,
Led hence a slave. Dryden.

The blind will always be led by those that see, or fall into the ditch: and he is the most subjected, the most enslaved, who is so in his understanding. Locke.

4. To expose; to make liable.
If the vessels yield, it subjects the person to all the inconveniences of an erroneous circulation. Arbutnot.

5. To submit; to make accountable.
God is not bound to subject his ways of operation to the scrutiny of our thoughts, and confine himself to do nothing but what we must comprehend. Locke.

6. To make subservient.
Subjected to his service angel-wings. Milton.

SUBJECT. adj. [subjectus, Latin.]
1. Placed or situated under.

Th' eastern tower,
Whose height commands, as subject, all the vale
To see the fight. Shakef. Troilus and C. effida.

2. Living under the dominion of another.
Esau was never subject to Jacob, but founded a distinct people and government, and was himself prince over them. Locke.

3. Exposed; liable; obnoxious.
Most subject is the fattest soil to weeds;
And the noble image of my youth
Is overpread with them. Shakef. Tempest.

All human things are subject to decay,
And when fate summons, monarchs must obey. Dryden.

4. Being that on which any action operates, whether intellectual or material.
I enter into the subject matter of my discourse. Dryden.

SUBJECT. n. f. [sujet, French.]
1. One who lives under the dominion of another.
Every subject's duty is the king's,
But every subject's soul is his own. Shakef. Henry V.
Never subject long'd to be a king,
As I do long and wish to be a subject. Shakef. Henry VI.
The
